An Outfit year ran from 1 June to 31 May*

After leaving the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company, he started his own fur trading business in the Cassiar District, in competition with the Company.

B.253/e/1, fo. 7; D.25/11, fo. 227, 256

In 1893, the Hudson's Bay Company sold their interests in the Cassiar District to John LaMontaigne and ceased to trade in the district. By the terms of the agreement between the Company and LaMontaigne, the Hudson's Bay Company exclusively supplied him with trade goods and supplies and took all his "furs, skins and gold dust" on consignment. The Company took over LaMontaigne's business in June/July 1897 and resumed trade in the Cassiar District.
